There were three Alove sisters - Mrs. Nero, Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Lallo.

They were born in the town of San Buono, Italy - a typical hill town in the Apennine Mountains 35 miles from the Adriatic Sea and 140 miles from Rome.

They were from the Abruzzo Region, which is situated in the central - eastern part of the Italian Peninsula.

The Province was Chieti. San Buono is known for its beautiful panoramic views.

The patron Saint is San Lorenzo.

My grandmother, Judith Alove married Jacob Lallo and their first son, Joseph was born in San Buono.

They immigrated to Brockway PA. and raised their family of seven children: Joseph, Mary, Elsie, Louis, Anthony, Theresa, and John.

They settled in the East End of town, which was the Italian section and they attended St. Tobias Church.

It is interesting to note that the three Alove sisters settled in Brockway in the East End of town and all lived close by each other.

I'm sure that their faith and their courage helped them to endure the many hardships of moving to a new country, but what a legacy they left to us.
